

CHEERS MARK THE OPENING OF PROGRESSIVE CONVENTION AT CHICAGO

NEGRO QUESTION GIVES PROMISE OF CAUSING SOME TROUBLE

ROOSEVELT CHEERED 52 MINUTES

HONOR ALSO PAID MRS. ROOSEVELT

BULL MOOSE HEADS DECORATE HALL

CHICAGO, August 5.—Although Roosevelt's "Confession of Faith" overshadowed everything today, the delegates admitted that the southern negro question is sure to cause a clash. The credentials committee has endorsed the national committee's action. The present situation is that Florida is not represented while negroes have been seated from other southern states.

The rules committee has prepared to report a resolution making the vote cast at the previous election the basis for representation at future conventions. It provides hereafter for one delegate for each 10,000 progressive votes polled. Thus the strong progressive states will be able to dictate the policies. When the convention met at noon all committees, except the resolutions committee, were ready to report. It was hoped the platform would be short, but apparently it will not be under a thousand words.

Undoubtedly it will urge a scientific tariff revision, Roosevelt's trust regulation plan, employers' liability, workmen's compensation, the settlement of the suffrage question by each state, a strong army and navy, judicial reform, and laws everywhere making the rule of the people easier as along the lines of Roosevelt's speech today. The committee will probably confer with Roosevelt tonight and finish the document.

The chief vice presidential candidates are Johnson of California, Lindsey and John Parker of New Orleans. Judge Lindsey declined a prominent chairmanship, and urged making the temporary organization permanent. Roosevelt has not indicated his vice presidential preference.

In concluding his "Confession of Faith" last night, Colonel Roosevelt said:

"Surely there never was a fight better worth making than the one in which we are engaged. It little matters what befalls any one of us who for the time being stand in the forefront of the battle. I hope we shall win, and I believe that if we can wake the people to what the fight really means we shall win. But, win or lose, we shall not falter. Whatever fate may at the moment overtake any of us, the movement itself will not stop. Our cause is based on the eternal principles of righteousness, and even though we who now lead may for the time fall, in the end the cause itself shall triumph. Six weeks ago, here in Chicago, I spoke to the honest representatives of a convention which was not dominated by honest men; a convention wherein sat, alas! a majority of men who, with sneering indifference to every principle of right, so acted as to bring to a shameful end a party which had been founded over half a century ago by men in whose souls burned the fire of lofty endeavor. Now to you men, who, in your turn, have come together to spend and be spent in the endless crusade against wrong, to you who face the future resolute and confident, to you who strive in a spirit of brotherhood for the betterment of our nation, to you who gird yourselves for this great new fight in the never-ending warfare for the good of mankind, I say in closing what in that speech I said in closing: We stand at Armageddon, and we battle for the Lord."

The Coliseum filled slowly this morning. The resolutions committee continued to work up to the time the session started at 12:45. The members are trying to get a concise document. The leaders have insisted that unless a concise document is secured it will not get the necessary publicity. Roosevelt appeared on the platform at 12:48 to a gale of cheers.

At 12:55 Beveridge called the convention to order with the delegates giving the "moose call." Rev. Father Andrew Spetz of Chicago pronounced the invocation. Beveridge announced a committee was with Roosevelt in waiting. The delegates leaped to their feet, cheering as the colonel appeared. The demonstration was started. Ten thousand flags and bandanas were waved as Roosevelt stood smiling and bowing waving to the galleries. Shouts of "We want Teddy," drowned the band.

The cheering continued, the colonel himself participating, by waving his arms and shouting. After 30 minutes of cheering Beveridge rapped for order but it only served to increase the din. Meyer Lissner carried a big bear pole of California upon the stage, numerous women accompanying him.

Throughout the demonstration the cheering was steady and continuous and devoid of the spasmodic outbursts always marking a "planted" demonstration. It lasted 52 minutes. Mr. Roosevelt was discovered by delegates while sitting in a box near a stuffed bull moose head decorating the balcony rail. She was cheered as the colonel threw her a kiss. The delegates gave her the Chatagua salute with bandanas. She finally arose and bowed her acknowledgement.

At 1:40, after the demonstration had been on for 52 minutes, the delegates and visitors resumed their seats so a picture could be taken.

Beveridge picturesquely introduced Roosevelt, "Gentlemen, the convention, the hour, the man—Theodore Roosevelt." Roosevelt advanced to the front with a printed copy of his speech clutched in his hand. Before turning to the text he congratulated the convention as to the work performed, and declared the party was dedicated to "justice, fair play and equality between man and man."

"It was with a real significance," shouted Roosevelt, "that this convention should be opened with music from fifes and drums, by men who faced death in their youth. It was significant that beside them stood the men who wore the gray. While I stood here two men came over. They said one was a Johnny and the other a Yank but were both now Americans and both progressives facing the future."

This departure from the set speech was cheered. He then proceeded with his speech.

Roosevelt concluded his speech at 3:39, holding practically every person in the hall until the conclusion.

At 3:55 o'clock the convention adjourned until 11 o'clock tomorrow.

OFFICE OF RENO INSURANCE MAN RANSACKED BY ROBBERS

J. H. Stotesbury, general agent for Nevada for the Continental Casualty company, with headquarters at Reno, and who spent several days here last week visiting his son, W. H. Stotesbury, of the Tonopah Mining company, had his Reno offices robbed Monday night, according to the Gazette, which has the following to say regarding the robbery:

A burglar last night entered the office of J. H. Stotesbury, a local insurance man, and ransacked the entire room, taking away some money and scattering papers all over the office. The thief was evidently familiar with the interior of the room, as he went to the desk and after opening it with a jimmy, opened the door in which some money, collected during Saturday afternoon, was placed, and took this. He then went through the remainder of the desk and destroyed a number of checks and threw papers from the desk all over the floor.

No other offices in the Ryland building, where Mr. Stotesbury has his office, were entered.

Just how much money was secured by the thief is at this time not known by Mr. Stotesbury, as he has not checked up his accounts and found just what amount was paid in Saturday afternoon after the bank closed. All the money taken in at the office after 3 o'clock was taken by the burglar.

Chief of Police Hillhouse this afternoon found that the burglar took from a drawer in the desk the sum of $27. The chief states that he believes the man who committed the crime was some person familiar with the conditions in the office and knew just where the money was kept. He is now working on the case and hopes to capture the thief.
